Its a dream come true for the people in lower Assam districts. In a major boost to address the surface communication gap, union road and transport minister Nitin Gadkari (/taxonomy/term/2430) opened the second Saraighat bridge over (/taxonomy/term/2166) the Brahmaputra (/taxonomy/term/2226) river in Guwahati on Sunday.

Gadkari (/taxonomy/term/2430), in his address, called it a milestone in the bid to bridge the yawning communication gap with Guwahati with the rest of the country.

Assam chief (/taxonomy/term/2020) minister Sarbananda Sonowal, transport minister Chandra Mohan Patowary, local MLA and education minister Himanta Biswa Sarma were present in the function organized in north Guwahati.

Ten (/taxonomy/term/2312) years back, the then prime minister Dr Manmohan Singh laid the foundation stone and it took ten (/taxonomy/term/2312) years to complete the huge bridge over (/taxonomy/term/2166) the Brahmaputra (/taxonomy/term/2226) river.
