There are numerous crimes in the world like theft, robbery, killing, arson, murder etc. But there are two crimes related to psychology. The first is raising the hopes of people only to be thrashed later, which is done by politicians. The second making smaller communities and tribes feel their traditional beliefs to be inferior, something practiced by Christian missionaries. Arunachal Pradesh is the best guinea pig for all kinds of experimentation. The Central government wiped out the naturally formed common language of the state which was Nefamese (a local style of Assamese unique to Arunachal). In its place, Hindi has been forced down the mouths of the people of Arunachal. Now we have the overt and covert practices of Christian missionaries who are systematically converting people into the Vatican city religion. With alien languages and alien beliefs, Arunachal Pradesh will slowly lose its original heritage.

Christian missionaries spread Christianity through two sectors, Education and Health. I request the Chief Minister of the state to take the reigns of education and health in the hands of the government. The tactics of conversion by missionaries is not exactly forced, but coercive. Poor, illiterate people are lured with the prospect of free education and free health care. Has the government of India kept a track of where this money comes from? Who provided the funds to build a massive statue of Jesus Christ in Miao? This is an international agenda whose records lie in Vatican city with the Pope. China has banned Christian missionaries in the country to preserve its indigenous beliefs and customs. Unlike Buddhism and Hinduism, Islam and Christianity brings in a homogenous culture where youngsters look down on their ancestral heritage and embrace customs imported from Mecca and Vatican. A part of us is lost.

On February 11 this year, 12 school children were charred to death and eight injured in a massive fire that broke out at a private hostel run by Don Bosco chain of schools at Palin in Kurung Kummpy district, 260 km north of state capital Itanagar. It is very sad and unfortunate that no proper probe has been conducted. Whether these boys were victims of crime of another kind and this incident was a cover up no one will know. The middle class and upper middle class children who study in day schools run by missionaries are unaware of the coercive conversions which go on sly among the missionary circles. Children from poor families and tribal areas are given free education and free hostel facility provided they take up Christianity as their religion. Is this the way religion is propagated? The state government is yet to gear up and formulate an education and health policy solely owned by the state.

China has taken all measures not to let Education and Health slip out of its hands unlike many state governments in India. India might not be able to match China's might and will power. But we can look at Bhutan. It doesn't boast of a booming GDP. But the king has ensured the happiness and contentment of its people and the Bhutan government has effectively warded off Christian missionaries from the Himalayan kingdom. I urge the chief minister Dorjee Khandu to wake up and take necessary precautions to curb conversion oriented activities by vested interests in the land of Donyi-Polo. Arunachal Pradesh should not be reduced to Nagaland, Mizoram or Meghalaya.
