AT News · 17:38, 25 Jul 2016 · 9867 views · 1 min read

A surging water level (/taxonomy/term/2232) of the Brahmaputra (/taxonomy/term/2226) will submerge the city (/taxonomy/term/1957) of Guwahati by the next couple of hours if the steep rising trend (/taxonomy/term/1658) in the water level (/taxonomy/term/2232) is any indication. The mighty river has been flowing dangerously on Monday following the incessant rains in the catchment areas in Arunachal (/taxonomy/term/2194) Pradesh.

According to information, the water level (/taxonomy/term/2232) of the river has gone up by 3 centimeters per hour till 4 in the city (/taxonomy/term/1957) till Monday afternoon. If the trend (/taxonomy/term/1658) continues the premier north eastern city (/taxonomy/term/1957) is bound to be submerged during the next 24 hours.

A set of measures is in place to face the eventuality where the DC office, CJM Court and parts of Fancy Bazar would be the first casualty. The disaster management authority is kept on high alert (</taxonomy/term/1634>) in view of the scene.
