A full fledged operation by police, army and other para military forces are on the cards in North Cachar hills in Assam. Irked by the law and order breakdown in the hills district, Assam Chief Minister Tarun Gogoi has asked police and other law enforcing agencies to strictly deal with the situation in the district.

According to information, Gogoi has instructed animal husbandry and veterinary minister Khor Singh Engti to rush to the trouble torn district to monitor the situation and to build confidence among the people. The Chief Minister has assured the family members of the those in the incidents of adequate compensation. Moreover, the government, he said, would rehabilitate those rendered homeless at the height of the incident. The Chief Minister's assurance and instruction came two days after the death of three persons were killed in two separate incidents of attack on two interior Dimasa villages in the hills district during the last two days.
