

Post-Mortem The Indian Premier League Twenty20

Comments 1

Monjib Mochahari 20 April 2008 10722 views

It's here, finally the BCCI's brainchild 'IPL Twenty20' is out in the field. Amidst dazzling fireworks, dance and funfare, a new cricketing history has spilled over from the pitch of M. Chinnaswami stadium, Bangalore, grabbing the headlines to be in the heart and spirit of the cricket-funs across the world.

Perhaps, the BCCI's baby concept is an inescapable reality at your door steps. No doubt, either ways you may call it 'a Cricket Tamasha' or 'a High quality cricket'-really?. Yet the fact is, though too early to say, will the IPL bring 'moksha' to Indian cricket. Certainly, doubtful. Why not call it 'a boom that will lead to doom' of the Indian cricket. Sure, this would be appropriate term to call it so.

In some ways, IPL isn't just about the reinvention of cricket. It is the transformation of the Indian cricket into a smart entertainment product in a more glamoured and globalized way. Obviously, there is one serious issue that will arise in the future, if at all the league continues. Out of the eight teams, six are owned by the corporate tycoons. Right now, the BCCI allows each franchise owner to hire only four foreign players in each team. The question is 'will this policy continue?' Will the franchise owners be content with majority Indian players?

Since the league is more of business and profit, only the top cricket legends can meet the demands of the corporate giants. The business tycoons are ready to hire the competitive players at any cost from around the world, as it adds to their income. There will be no room for non-performers. The lack of good cricketers in the country will force the team owners to look for talents outside the country. Sooner or later, most of the Indian players will be out of the tournament. After all, will it not be a doom's day for Indian cricket? - a killing field of talents where no Indians can survive.

So, for obvious reason, the baby 'IPL Twenty20' is not only a cocktail of sport, entertainment and business - but a story of bleak and uncertainty. Love it or hate it, the history will remember in its own way. And remember the screen kings and queens have already descended to the ground. What is glorious today can also be a nightmare tomorrow.

Monjib Mochahari

BY MONJIB MOCHAHARI

19 arrested in Udalguri

Deadly indeed, violence against women

India's Third Sex, citizens without rights

Stop! say no to ragging

Net-savy politicians log on for Gen Next voters

ON THIS DAY

NE culture programme in London from Monday

1 NDFB(S) cadre, 2 suspected linkman apprehended in Udalguri

Lady bank manager shot dead by miscreants

7th pay commission to implement in Tripura

Girish Chandra Bhattacharjya remembered
