Weather is fine and so also tourists from the state and even from France and others foreign counties are rushing to Majuli to attend the Raas festival in the world's largest river island which gets underway on Saturday.

Amid tight security arrangement, the Jorhat district administration is arranging special ferry services for the people to reach Majuli. The people in the island too are making elaborate arrangement to make the grand festival a success.

Speaking to Assam Times, the central celebration committee officials of the Raas Festival say nine tourists are also arriving to attend the Raas Lila of the Lord Krishna.

Its 167th year for the Dakshinpaat Sattr, which has been observing the Raas festival while the Auniati Xatra's festival completes 100.
